AARON ROSS: DAYLIGHT

WORLD PREMIER!

Aaron Ross is a recent success story in Canadian music. Returning from a trip to Southeast Asia, direct from adventures through Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and China, he was offered a contract with Vancouver indie label Lit Fuse Records. This Spring he recorded his debut full-length album, "Butterfly Man", which is due for release in October.

What Jack Johnson is to Hawaiian surf culture, Aaron Ross is to international backpacking culture. Riding his motorbike from country to country and staying in hostels along the way, Aaron absorbs musical influences and slang from locals and fellow travelers. His music is rich and eclectic, ranging from Latin, Soul and Folk to Bluegrass and the Blues, with devilish guitar skills and a voice like cream pouring.

"Butterfly Man" is a slang term in Asia for someone who refuses to settle down, moving instead from flower to flower, from place to place, sipping the nectar that life has to offer.

Now, Aaron Ross is coming to the Edinburgh Festival Fringe for an exclusive engagement. Lit Fuse Records happens to be owned by Baba Brinkman, famous for his reworking of Chaucer, "The Rap Canterbury Tales" ("Truly awe-inspiring...★★★★★" Scotsman) which took the Fringe by storm in 2004. Brinkman knows the perils and the potential of the Fringe, and with his help the "Butterfly Man" is breaking out of his cocoon and spreading his wings at St Augustine's. Don't miss it.
